PAGE ONE (seven panels)

Panel 1: A beautiful, sunny afternoon. A spider sits at the edge of its web, spun between tree branches. It watches a dandelion seed, which floats through the air a good distance away.

CAP:

Once upon a time a spider fell in love with a dandelion.

Panel 2: A gentle wind guides the dandelion closer to the spider's tree.

Panel 3: The wind blows the dandelion into the centre of the spider's web. The spider looks at the fluffy seed with wonder.

Panel 4: The wind pushes the dandelion upwards, causing it to tumble along the web. Some of its fluffy bristles stick to the web and tear off.

Panel 5: The spider rushes towards the dandelion in horror. The seed continues to tumble upwards, tearing off more of its bristles.

Panel 6: The spider in the middle of the web, among the seed's discarded bristles. The seed drifts off the top of the web. Most of its bristles have been torn off and are stuck to the web.

Panel 7: The spider at the top of the web. It is sad. It watches the broken dandelion float away on the wind.
